The history of our country goes back many millennia. And the history of these periods is interesting and colorful from one to another. In the history of our statehood, the era of khanates also has its place. These khanates are states with a long history in our country after the reign of the Timurids. On the example of these states, the Shaybanid dynasty of the Bukhara Khanate occupies the greatest position. This is because it was this dynasty that brought to an end the great upheaval of the Temurians in the country. It was after Amir Temur that two rulers existed in this land who were literally followers of him. They are Muhammad Shaybani Khan and Abdullah Khan II. Let us dwell not on the invasions of these rulers, on the course of life, on the political system or on the order of control, but on the peculiarly attentive aspects of their life.

Muhammad Shaybani Khan put an end to the Temüri rulers ' struggle among themselves. Movarounnahr and Khurosan were united and the rule of the Shaybanid dynasty was decided. Muhammad Shaybani Khan took the title of" Imam uz-Zamin"," Khalifat ur-Rahman " and united secular and religious authority in his hands. [1:187]. In addition, Shaybani Khan was also involved in calligraphy.[2:206]. Sultan Ali Mashhadi, who lived during this period, spent most of his life first in the courts of Sultan Abusaid and then Sultan Husayn Boyqaro. After Herat passed into the hands of Shaybani Khan in 1507, he began moving books for Shaybani Khan. [2: 168] Q.In his article, "Dashti Qqipjach lochini or Shaybani Khan" by yulchiyev, sa'dulla Siyoyev, "the peculiarities of the image of Shaybani Khan", Shaybani Khan was well versed in the Qur'an and welcomed conversations with religious scribes and poets. One can find information that Zahiriddin Muhammad Babur, the ruler's political rival, was also well versed in Islam. In the meantime, Shaybani Khan knew himself to memorize the accounts, dozens of ghazals of Alisher Nawai's spiritual disciple, and had copied his first Devonian with his own hands. Shaybani Khan appreciated the Turkic language extremely. He orders in Herat that from this onwards the Devonian Affairs will be marched in Turkic. Unfortunately with the death of Shaybani Khan, Devonian affairs were transferred from Turkic to Persian.[3:92]. Muhammad Shaybani Khan had taken Mashhad and other cities in northern Iran by marching to Iran in 1510. When the Iranian King turned against Shaybani Khan with his main forces, he had gone from Mashhad to Marv via Serahs. Informed of this, king Ismail's army of 70,000 men surrounded the Marv fortress.[4:678]. In the autumn of 1510, Shaybani Khan engaged the forces of Ismail Safawi, the King of Iran, who had followed in his footsteps with great force. In this battle, which took place near Marv, Shaybani Khan's few troops were defeated, and Muhammad Shahbakht Shaybani Khan, glorified by his contemporaries as “Khalifa ur-Rahman” and “Imam az-Zaman”, would be killed in battle.[2: 178] the Iranians captured Shaybani Khan and on December 12, 1510, lost his head from his body and hooked him to the tip of a spear. Zaki Walidi Damon writes that by order of King Ismail, a glass of wine was made from the skull of Shaybani Khan, and it was decorated with gold and sent as a gift to the Egyptian Sultan Falaj. Because Falaj, like Shaybani Khan, was a Sunni sect and loved him very much. The arrival of a gold Goblet made from the skull of Shaybani Khan in Egypt aroused great discontent among the Sunni sectarian population. The Egyptian Sultan Qansu Gavri buries the skull with great respect.[5:17]. His headless body was buried in the High Sufa in Samarkand. The tall Sufa is located on the corner between the madrasas of Tillakori and Sherdor in the Registan Square, where other Shaybani were later buried. [4:679]

After Shaybani Khan passed a number of rulers who belonged to this dynasty. But, Abdullah Khan II was the only and last statesman to receive a relatively strict policy yurgiza in Movarounnahr after Amir Temur. After reaching Ulughtaq in the west of the present-day Karaganda region of Kazakhstan, north of the Sariqsuv River, in an attempt to restore Bukhara authority, he gets his eye on the words that were written in a tower on the top of the mountain. These scrolls are

In 1391, Kezi, who drew an army against Amir Temur Thamish Khan, climbed this mountain and then built a tower here and carved it into a stone. Abdullah Khan II, teaching prayers to the great sahibqiran, ordered himself to build a tower on the opposite side, and would carve the words to him “whoever steps to this address, bless us with a prayer of charity”.[6:240-241].Amir Temur is known to have built the mausoleum and Mosque of Khoja Ahmad Yassawi in Turkestan. The completion of the unfinished work goes to Abdullah Khan II.[5:25] Abdullah Khan II himself was a talented poet who wrote poetry in Uzbek and Persian under the pseudonym “Khan”.[5: 28] Abdullah Khan II also did some work in the military field. In particular, the pilta brought from Turkey began to be armed with rifles and cannons.[7: 32-34] by the commission of Abdullah Khan II, 7 cannons had been prepared in time. [2: 204] Abdullah Khan II succeeded in reestablishing the state formed by Shaybani Khan by capturing all of Movarounnahr, Khurosan, Khwarazm and Turkestan after long years of war.[2: 183] the occupation of Khurosan by Abdullah II reaches the ears of even the Russian Tsar Fyodor. He concludes that the Kazakh Sultans and the Iranian king must fight the Shaybanids together.[2:185]

There is much historical evidence for the death of Abdullah Khan II. That is, Abdullah Khan II was poisoned to death by his son Abdulmomin in 1598. The work was organized by one of the heads of the military nobility, Muhammad Boqibiy. [5: 26] and in another source, against Abdullah Khan, his son returns Abdulmomin, while from the Kazakh Khans who used a disagreement between Abdullah Khan II and his son Abdulmomin on the question of the throne, Taqqal Khan invades the lands of the Tashkent region. Mounted on a journey against him

Abdullah Khan II dies when he reaches Samarkand. Abdulmumin, who had been elevated to the throne in place of Abdullah II, became ruler for about 6 months, when he was shot and killed by one of his father's emirs - Abdulvose’.[1:189]

In place of the conclusion, we can mention that it is no doubt that both rulers were holders of high skill and intelligence for their time. One of the rulers who managed to maintain the independence of the country even in an extremely difficult situation. These individuals are eternal in our history. After all, as our first president noted: “without historical memory – there is no future.”
