ISSN: 2582-4686 SJIF 2021-3.261, 2022-2.889, 2023-5.384, 2024-6.875 ResearchBib IF: 9.948 / 2024

THE MULTIDISCIPLINARY JOURNAL OF SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

VOLUME-5, ISSUE-5

ANGEL BOLIGAN'S WORK: SOCIAL CRITICISM IN THE GROTESQUE STYLE

Zohira Akhatova Daughter of Akhtam, 3rd-year student of the Department of Art History (Visual and Applied Arts) at the Faculty of Art History and Museum Studies, Kamoliddin Behzod National Institute of Fine Arts and Design.

Abstract: The work of Angel Boligan is fascinating, as through the symbols and images depicted in his pieces, he illustrates the psychological and emotional separation of humanity, as well as the influence of technology and social networks on human thought. For instance, in the work The Offering and the Sheep, the stick associated with the Facebook logo and the image of sheep with their heads down express the loss of independent thinking and the intensification of manipulation. In Easter Bread, the criticism of the "like" and "status" struggles present on social networks is portrayed through people dressed in priestly attire. Another grotesque piece, Family, depicts how new technologies and social networks are separating family members. Additionally, the work The Forced Buyer critiques consumerism and the relationship between the economic factors determining the value of art.

Keywords: Angel Boligan, grotesque, social networks, Facebook, The Offering and the Sheep, Easter Bread, Family New Year, Big Screen, The Forced Buyer.

INTRODUCTION

Angel Boligan is a renowned Mexican caricaturist, artist, and illustrator who deeply analyzes social and political issues. In 2025, Uzbekistan declared the year "Environmental Protection and Green Economy Year." As the topic of ecology has become a global issue, not only in Uzbekistan but around the world, the work of Mexican artist Ángel Boligan—especially his satirical pieces—deserves attention as a means of expressing environmental issues through art.

MAIN PART

Boligan, Angel. "The Offering and The Sheep." 2014.

Boligan, Angel. "Easter Bread." 2021.

Angel Boligan's upcoming works are in the style of domestic grotesque, and in his works The Offering and The Sheep, the stick in The Offering's hand, instead of the usual one, takes the shape of the Facebook logo, the "F" letter.[1] This symbolizes a critique of the blindly following masses, represented by the sheep with their heads turned down[2]. Sheep, traditionally symbols of obedience and the psychology of the masses, are here paralleled with people who are susceptible to manipulation and act under the influence of others, without forming their own opinion.[3] The herder figure in these works is not just someone who manages the flock but someone who knows exactly how to control them, a master of the art of manipulation.[4] His attire evokes that of the classic wealthy class or ruling elite, suggesting which group's interests are served by the forces behind the networks. His second work, titled Easter Bread, references the Christian holiday of Easter, and in the piece, the bread, which is sacred in their traditions, represents the holiday[5]. The figure, dressed in priestly attire that evokes Facebook, is feeding bread shaped like the "like" symbol to a person standing in front of him, who accepts it without resistance.[6] This further supports the concept explored in The Offering and The Sheep.

ISSN: 2582-4686 SJIF 2021-3.261, 2022-2.889, 2023-5.384, 2024-6.875 ResearchBib IF: 9.948 / 2024

THE MULTIDISCIPLINARY JOURNAL OF SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

VOLUME-5, ISSUE-5

Boligan, Angel. "Family New Year." 2024.

In another work created in a grotesque style, Boligan addresses a relevant topic in contemporary domestic life, satirizing the erosion of family values. The scene depicts what should be a symbol of celebration, warmth, and closeness. However, instead of emotional warmth, the painting reflects coldness, loneliness, and artificial happiness[7]. The main idea of the piece is that while modern gadgets may appear to bring us closer, they are, in reality, intensifying emotional and psychological separation[8]. Family members are gathered in one place, but each is absorbed in their own "digital scene." Even young children are influenced by this, while the older generation is bored and pushed

[1] Orsi, Robert A. The Grotesque in Art and Literature: Theological Reflections. Cambridge University Press, 2010, pp. 45-46.
[2] Boligan, Angel. Angel Boligan: Graphic Worlds. Museo de la Caricatura, 2018, pp. 15-17.
[3] Carr, Nicholas. The Shallows: What the Internet Is Doing to Our Brains. W.W. Norton & Company, 2011, pp. 72-74.
[4] Lipschultz, Jeremy Harris. The Social Media Age: A Historical Perspective. Routledge, 2017, pp. 23-25.
[5] Apkon, Stephen. The Age of the Image: Redefining Literacy in a World of Screens. Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 2013, pp. 18-20.

[6] Aylon, Hélène. Religion and Art: The Reception of the Sacred in Art History. Routledge, 2015, pp. 120-122.
[7] Turkle, Sherry. Reclaiming Conversation: The Power of Talk in a Digital Age. Penguin Press, 2015, pp. 120-123.
[8] Bugeja, Michael J., and John P. Lavine. The Wired Society: The Social Impact of the Internet. Longman, 2002, pp. 45-47.

ISSN: 2582-4686 SJIF 2021-3.261, 2022-2.889, 2023-5.384, 2024-6.875 ResearchBib IF: 9.948 / 2024

THE MULTIDISCIPLINARY JOURNAL OF SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

VOLUME-5, ISSUE-5

aside — details that highlight real-life situations that often go unnoticed[9]. What is called a "family" gathering has actually turned into a "virtual personal" experience. The color choices further enhance this mood: joy exists only for the sake of the pictures, while genuine emotion has disappeared. The natural, sincere connections between people depicted in the work are now replaced by algorithm-driven, filtered, "like" seeking performances.

Boligan, Angel. "The Extra Large Screen." 2018.

In modern society, media has become an inseparable and even mandatory part of human life[10]. This work, also created in a grotesque style, depicts a large television screen being forcibly introduced into a regular home — it cannot fit through the door, but it must be brought inside[11]. Despite the walls of the house cracking, the massive screen must fit into the home. Through this, the artist critiques the information overload in society and the intrusion of technology into personal life[12]. The screen in the artwork is not just ordinary household technology; it represents an exaggerated form of society's obsession with showcasing one's life to others, the need to present a "perfect" life[13]. This piece aligns with other works by Boligan, such as Family New Year, Easter Bread, and The Offering and The Sheep. In all these works, people are increasingly focused on external appearances, "likes," and "status," losing their true spiritual lives.

[9] Gergen, Kenneth J. The Saturated Self: Dilemmas of Identity in Contemporary Life. Basic Books, 1991, pp. 98-101.
[10] Zuboff, Shoshana. The Age of Surveillance Capitalism: The Fight for a Human Future at the New Frontier of Power. PublicAffairs, 2019, pp. 45-50.
[11] Bauman, Zygmunt. Liquid Modernity. Polity Press, 2000, pp. 78-80.
[12] Turkle, Sherry. Alone Together: Why We Expect More from Technology and Less from Each Other. Basic Books, 2011, pp. 102-104.
[13] Klein, Naomi. The Shock Doctrine: The Rise of Disaster Capitalism. Picador, 2007, pp. 150-153.

ISSN: 2582-4686 SJIF 2021-3.261, 2022-2.889, 2023-5.384, 2024-6.875 ResearchBib IF: 9.948 / 2024

THE MULTIDISCIPLINARY JOURNAL OF SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

VOLUME-5, ISSUE-5

Angel Boligan. "The Season of Gifts." 2024. Angel Boligan. "The Forced Buyer." 2024.

These two works, created in a grotesque style, depict contemporary society and the significant issues in human life, highlighting how excessive wastefulness is allowed while more pressing concerns are neglected[14]. In the first work, a large cart filled with gifts symbolizes the materialism and the relentless pursuit of wealth. A small piggy bank, designed for children to save money, ironically calls for frugality[15]. In the second work, The Forced Buyer, there is a powerful visual allegory criticizing the consumerist nature of modern society. The piece references the famous "Comedian" installation by Italian artist Maurizio Cattelan, which featured a banana taped to the wall and sold for a high price[16]. Boligan's piece critiques how the economic value of art is often determined by market forces and how consumers are coerced into buying such products[17]. The brick wall placed in the cart symbolizes useless or excessive burdens, illustrating how people are often forced to purchase things that do not align with their actual needs.

CONCLUSION

Angel Boligan's works sharply critique contemporary social and moral issues, illustrating how individuals' inner worlds are shaped by social networks and technology. The artist uniquely expresses pressing issues of today such as materialism, consumerism, and manipulation through his distinctive grotesque style. The images and symbols in his works reveal how dependence on outward appearance and status negatively impacts one's spiritual state. Thus, Boligan's art analyzes modern society, its [14] Klein, Naomi. No Logo: Taking Aim at the Brand Bullies. Picador, 2000, pp. 120-123.

[15] Bauman, Zygmunt. Consuming Life. Polity Press, 2007, pp. 60-62.
[16] Schor, Juliet B. The Overspent American: Why We Want What We Don't Need. HarperCollins, 1998, pp. 112-115.
[17] Zuboff, Shoshana. The Age of Surveillance Capitalism: The Fight for a Human Future at the New Frontier of Power. PublicAffairs, 2019, pp. 50-52.

ISSN: 2582-4686 SJIF 2021-3.261, 2022-2.889, 2023-5.384, 2024-6.875 ResearchBib IF: 9.948 / 2024

internal decisions, and transformations, while serving to highlight humanity's true need for meaning. This connects his works not only to art but also to social and cultural purposes.

LIST OF REFERENCES

1. Orsi, Robert A. The Grotesque in Art and Literature: Theological Reflections. Cambridge University Press, 2010, pp. 45-46.
2. Boligan, Angel. Angel Boligan: Graphic Worlds. Museo de la Caricatura, 2018, pp. 15-17.
3. Carr, Nicholas. The Shallows: What the Internet Is Doing to Our Brains. W.W. Norton & Company, 2011, pp. 72-74.
4. Lipschultz, Jeremy Harris. The Social Media Age: A Historical Perspective. Routledge, 2017, pp. 23-25.
5. Apkon, Stephen. The Age of the Image: Redefining Literacy in a World of Screens. Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 2013, pp. 18-20.
6. Aylon, Hélène. Religion and Art: The Reception of the Sacred in Art History.
7. Routledge, 2015, pp. 120-122. Turkle, Sherry. Reclaiming Conversation: The Power of Talk in a Digital Age. Penguin Press, 2015, pp. 120-123.
8. Bugeja, Michael J., and John P. Lavine. The Wired Society: The Social Impact of the Internet. Longman, 2002, pp. 45-47.
9. Gergen, Kenneth J. The Saturated Self: Dilemmas of Identity in Contemporary Life. Basic Books, 1991, pp. 98-101.
10. Zuboff, Shoshana. The Age of Surveillance Capitalism: The Fight for a Human Future at the New Frontier of Power. PublicAffairs, 2019, pp. 45-50.
11. Bauman, Zygmunt. Liquid Modernity. Polity Press, 2000, pp. 78-80.
12. Turkle, Sherry. Alone Together: Why We Expect More from Technology and Less from Each Other. Basic Books, 2011, pp. 102-104.
13. Klein, Naomi. The Shock Doctrine: The Rise of Disaster Capitalism. Picador, 2007, pp. 150-153.
14. Klein, Naomi. No Logo: Taking Aim at the Brand Bullies. Picador, 2000, pp. 120-123.
15. Bauman, Zygmunt. Consuming Life. Polity Press, 2007, pp. 60-62.
16. Schor, Juliet B. The Overspent American: Why We Want What We Don't Need. HarperCollins, 1998, pp. 112-115.
17. Zuboff, Shoshana. The Age of Surveillance Capitalism: The Fight for a Human Future at the New Frontier of Power. PublicAffairs, 2019, pp. 50-52.