ISSN: 2582-4686 SJIF 2021-3.261, 2022-2.889, 2023-5.384, 2024-6.875 ResearchBib IF: 9.948 / 2024

THE MULTIDISCIPLINARY JOURNAL OF SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

VOLUME-5, ISSUE-5

Linguistic and cultural characteristics of proverbs from the Khorezm oasis

Jumanyazova Muhabbat Khusinovna

Associate Professor, Candidate of Philological Sciences, Urgench State University named after Abu Rayhon Beruni

khiva1970@mail.ru

Abstract. This article explores the linguistic and cultural characteristics of proverbs from the Khorezm region. It analyzes their lexical, semantic, and pragmatic features within the context of linguistic cultural studies. The research highlights how proverbs serve as a means of reflecting the national mentality, values, worldview, and social norms of the Khorezmian people. The study is based on the classification and functional usage of proverbs in everyday speech. The findings demonstrate that Khorezm proverbs are rich in metaphorical expressions and cultural-specific elements that distinguish them within Uzbek paremiology.

Keywords: Khorezm proverbs, linguoculture, semantics, pragmatics, lexical analysis, national mentality.

1. Introduction

The national consciousness, history, culture, and worldview of every nation find vivid expression in its oral folklore, particularly in proverbs. Proverbs are a strong reflection of the people's life experience, wisdom, and attitude toward life accumulated over centuries. They are important linguocultural units that illuminate a nation's intellectual heritage, worldview, and values. Proverbs embody the moral norms of society, its historical experience, and social psychology, and are deeply rooted in both language and culture. The Khorezm region — distinguished by its unique dialect, rich historical and cultural heritage, and oral creative traditions — is vividly reflected in its proverbs, which showcase the people's wisdom, way of life, and customs.

The article examines the lexical-semantic, pragmatic, and linguocultural aspects of proverbs specific to the Khorezm region. It also highlights the distinctive features that differentiate them from commonly used national proverbs.

2. Methods

In this study, descriptive-linguistic analysis, semantic-functional approach, and cultural-contextual analysis methods were employed. Proverbs specific to the Khorezm region were selected from sources such as Uzbek Folk Proverbs (Sodiqov, 1980) and Oral Creativity of Khorezm Region (Haydarov, 2011). Each proverb was examined based on the following criteria during the analysis process:

- lexical composition and the presence of dialectal words;
- semantic content and metaphorical load;
- pragmatic function: the reason for use and its role in discourse;
- cultural and national components.

3. Results

According to the results of the study, the proverbs specific to the Khorezm region are distinguished by the following features:

3.1. Lexical Features. In many cases, the proverbs contain lexemes characteristic of local dialects or vernacular speech. For instance, in the proverb “Olma qoqsa-chi, ayol toqsa-chi” (“What if the apple falls, what if the woman gives birth?”), the word “toqmoq” is a dialectal term from the

ISSN: 2582-4686 SJIF 2021-3.261, 2022-2.889, 2023-5.384, 2024-6.875 ResearchBib IF: 9.948 / 2024

THE MULTIDISCIPLINARY JOURNAL OF SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

VOLUME-5, ISSUE-5

Khorezm vernacular referring to childbirth or pregnancy. Similarly, in the proverb "Ko'z og'riganda ko'lmakka qarar" ("When the eye hurts, it looks at a puddle"), the word "ko'lmak" means "muddy water" in standard literary Uzbek but is widely used in the Khorezm dialect. Such words enhance the emotional and expressive power of speech. These proverbs often feature dialectal words, ethnographic terms, and archaic Turkic elements. For example: "Qiyma qil, qushning qorasi yo'q" ("Make minced meat; there's no dark part in the bird") — where "qiyma qil" is a dialectal expression. Or: "Yomon ayol erkakka yo'ldosh, o'rtoq bo'lmaydi" ("A bad woman is no companion or partner to a man") — a critical reflection of the woman's role in society.

3.2. Semantic Features.

In the proverb "Ekinga qara – bir yillik, bolaga qara – umrlik" ("Take care of crops – it's for a year; take care of a child – it's for a lifetime"), the repetition of the verb "qara" ("take care") is used to contrast temporary benefit (crops) with long-term spiritual wealth (a child), reflecting key values in the worldview of the people.

Many proverbs possess deep semantic layers, employing stylistic devices such as simile, irony, sarcasm, and metaphor. For example, "Qo'yga bo'ri boqsa, kechasi yo'q" ("If a wolf tends the sheep, there will be no night") expresses distrust through irony.

Another example, "El ichida qush yurmas, yurmasdan tosh urmas" ("A bird doesn't fly among the people, nor is it stoned without flying") conveys the idea that without action or presence in society, there would be no gossip or criticism — implying that public attention arises from visible behavior.

3.3. Pragmatic Features.

Proverbs from the Khorezm region serve various communicative functions in speech, such as warning, advising, and criticizing. They are predominantly transmitted orally from generation to generation. For example, "Otangni so'kma — o'zingni yo'qotarsan" ("Do not curse your father — you will lose yourself") carries a warning message.

"Qatiqqa tupurma, ertaga o'zing ichasan" ("Don't spit into the yogurt — you'll drink it yourself tomorrow") is a piece of folk wisdom conveying a moral lesson.

Proverbs are not merely informative but function as linguistic units with specific socio-pragmatic roles. Through Khorezm proverbs, speakers achieve purposes such as reprimanding, mocking, instructing, and instilling moral values. For instance, the proverb "Yolg'onning umri qisqa" ("A lie has a short life") serves to condemn dishonesty and promote human virtues.

4. Discussion. Proverbs of the Khorezm region hold a distinctive place within the overall paremiological system of the Uzbek language. They reflect various aspects of people's lives, including occupations, clan and tribal relations, natural environment, and norms of morality and etiquette. These proverbs reveal the role of language as a cultural code (Kubekin, 2004).

The analysis shows that Khorezm proverbs predominantly express conservative moral values—such as respect for parents and the role of women—as well as markers specific to the local context (e.g., cotton, yogurt, livestock life). Their initial oral form is closely linked to memorability and rhythmic expression. These features make them valuable material for linguocultural research.

5. Conclusion. The proverbs of the Khorezm region are vivid examples of folk wisdom and national culture, and their linguistic analysis sheds light on various aspects of social life. The study revealed that these proverbs reflect the national mentality, represent an active component of oral tradition, and preserve dialectal elements. Therefore, they serve as a unique source for linguocultural research. Studying Khorezm proverbs is not only significant for linguistics but also crucial for the preservation and development of cultural heritage.

ISSN: 2582-4686 SJIF 2021-3.261, 2022-2.889, 2023-5.384, 2024-6.875 ResearchBib IF: 9.948 / 2024

THE MULTIDISCIPLINARY JOURNAL OF SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

VOLUME-5, ISSUE-5

References:

1. Abdullaeva, M. (2008). O‘zbek xalq maqollarining lingvomadaniy xususiyatlari. Toshkent: Fan.

2. Nazarov, Q. (2015). O‘zbek xalq maqollari tilining lingvokulturologik xususiyatlari. Toshkent: O‘zbekiston Respublikasi Fanlar akademiyasi.

3. Sodiqov, A. (1980). O‘zbek xalq maqollari. Toshkent: Fan.

4. Saidov, A. (2005). Madaniyatshunoslik va til. Toshkent: Mukammal nashr.

5. Xorazm viloyati og‘zaki ijodi. (2011). (J. Haydarov, Ed.). Urganch: UrDU nashriyoti.

6. Parpiyev, H. (2002). O‘zbek xalqining folklor janrlari. Toshkent: Ma’naviyat.

7. Kubekin, A. V. (2004). Lingvokulturologiya: Teoreticheskie i prikladnye aspekty. Moskva: Vysshaya shkola.

8. Salimov, Sh. (1998). O‘zbek tilining frazeologiyasi va maqollari. Toshkent: Fan.